Bone Song N. D. Hansen-Hill, Melody Knight

Justin Hyde studies the past. It's a manufactured past, and Justin is one of the few who realizes it. It's his job to discover...what isn't there.

Only recently, he has grown tired of deceit. His closest friends are so different from him that they would be appalled if they knew the extent of the deception on which they've based their lives, their careers.

Meanwhile, Justin is under pressure to carry on in his father's footsteps. It is a task he hates, and he is as trapped by tradition as he is by his genes. And if he chooses not to honor his family's wishes, he may have only one real choice...
